The fourth planned BioBlitz event took place in Sardinia, by the Gulf of Oristano. We prepared a short report from this event.

Third from the four planned bioblitz have been just completed in Dublin, see the short report from this event

Watch the report from the second event, which took place in Tromsø in July 2024. A team of scientists explored the shore during low tide to collect and photograph specimens and then identify the collected species.

More about this event is here

BioBlitz - is a special event, where biologists are gathered in one place accessible to the public to identify as many as possible species within 24 hours. This is both important scientific data collected by professionals and a public event that shows how rich is the biodiversity even in the most trivial sites. Important observation is how many specialists one needs to identify all organisms - from uni cellular algae to bats and fish. No one knows all the species. Within MARBEFES project we wants to organise such events in all of the four regions - Sopot (June 2023, Tromso June 2024, Dublin 2025 and Sardinia 2025). The first from the four planned MARBEFES BioBlitz actions was organized at the Baltic sea shore in Sopot, Poland. The key idea is to find coastal site that is accessible and known for the wide public – ideally a public park at the seaside. This was the case in Sopot with “Park Północny” that covers coastal boreal deciduous forest, wetland, small river, dune, exposed beach and sandy shallows with diversified bottom – stony outcrops, seagrass and mobile sands. Altogether there were 37 scientists from different Institutions with diverse scientific background involved in search and identification.
